THE REGISTRATION COURTS.

MARYLEBONE.

Mr. James Newton Goren opened his third court for this borough in the board-room at the St. Pancras Vestry-hall yesterday for the revision of the list of voters for that parish.

Mr. Frank Higgins and Mr. Yapp represented the Conservative party; Mr. J. Kenwick Seager and Mr. Riches the Liberal; and Mr. Peter Rowden and Mr. George Fithian the Local Option Union and United Kingdom Alliance.

The total new householders' claims amounted to 354. Of these 76 came from the Liberal side. The old lodger claims numbered 558, the new lodger claims 2,487. Of these 2,294 were Liberal and 193 Conservative. The total objections are 2,087, all coming from the Conservative side.

At the opening of the revision an amusing incident took place. Mr. Chester Foulsham, of 9, Caversham-road, whose name had been objected to by the Conservatives on the ground that he was dead, appeared to oppose the objection. He stated that he was the owner of the house, and was living in it, and had been so for years; but that his father whose name was the same as his own, had lived with him, and he died in April last, hence he supposed the mistake. He was by profession an architect, and had been put to considerable inconvenience and expense in being compelled to come to that court. Under these circumstances he applied for his expenses from the objectors.

Mr. Higgins, the Conservative agent, said from inquiries instituted they learnt that Chester Foulsham was dead, and therefore it was only reasonable to suggest that his name should be taken off the list of voters.

Mr. Foulsham contended that had proper inquiries been made correct information would have been afforded, and he would have been saved the trouble and inconvenience of attending the court.

The Revising Barrister desired to know what amount Mr. Foulsham considered he was entitled to claim, and

Mr. Foulsham replied he would leave that to the consideration of the learned gentleman as a professional man.

The learned Barrister said under the circumstances he thought the objection a very reasonable one, and as it was still early in the day he thought it hardly fair Mr. Foulsham should press his claim for expenses. His name would, as a matter of course, be retained on the list of voters.

Mr. Foulsham said he bowed to the decision of the Barrister, and withdrew.

In the consideration of some claims which had been placed on the list by the overseers and supported by the vestry, a controversy took place between the Barrister and the Conservative agent. This arose in a case in the same position as those which the vestry had placed on the list, some 4,000 odd, as occupiers by reason of the landlord being non-resident. In addition to those which the vestry had placed on, some 354 persons had made similar claims, and the vestry by their officers, supported them.

In these cases the Barrister decided to accept the evidence of the parochial officials, who, it was stated, had made proper inquiries without requiring the attendance of the parties.

This was strenuously resisted by Mr. Higgins, the Conservative agent.

Amongst the printed lists of claims was one by Daniel Popkins, for 18, Little Camden-street, and Mr. Higgins pointed out that there was already a John Popkins on for the same house, and he believed that Daniel Popkins was one and the same person, but the parochial officer who had made the inquiries stated that he believed they were two separate persons, having a separate occupation.

Mr. Higgins, on the Barrister deciding to admit the claim, contended that the revision was being hurried through in a most improper manner, and demanded that one of these names should be struck out, as John and Daniel Popkins were the same person.

Mr. Seager, the Liberal agent, protested there was not a tittle of evidence to show the truth of such an assertion, and, in the absence of testimony to support it, objected to so arbitrary a course being taken to strike out the name.

Mr. Higgins strongly censured the parish official for not making sufficient inquiries, and said he objected to the revision being carried on in so rapid a manner.

The Revising Barrister said he should overrule Mr. Higgins's objections, and allow both names to stand.

Mr. Higgins here warmly disputed the Barrister's decision as being a correct one, and described his revision as precipitate, but

The Barrister called on the next case.

Mr. Higgins insisted on his objection being allowed without further proof, and was proceeding, when

The Barrister said he would not allow the business of the court to be interrupted.

Mr. Higgins—I have a right to object.

The Barrister—You have no right to object in so objectionable a manner; I will not allow it. If it was your own case you would as strenuously support it.

At this stage of the proceedings the court adjourned for luncheon, and during the interval the Conservative agent made inquiries at 18, Little Camden-street, and on the information being sworn, he proved that there was only one occupant of the name of Popkins at the address given. In the course of conversation it transpired that John Popkins desiring to correct his name, had claimed as "Daniel."

John Popkins was then struck out by the Barrister.

During the afternoon the court proceeded with the other lists.

Shortly before the rising of the court the name of Edward Johns Bird, of the firm of Ind, Coope, and Co., was reached. He claimed for a house and warehouse used as ale stores in the Pancras-road.

Mr. Seager objected to the claim on the ground that it was not dated, bearing only the word "Aug." and the year "1883."

The Barrister admitted the objection and struck out the name, as he did also in the cases of Edward Jesser Coope, and Octavius Edward Coope, members of the same firm, who claimed as joint occupiers of the same warehouse, the claims of those gentlemen being also imperfectly dated in the same way. When the name of Edward Thomas Helme, another member of the firm was called, the claim was found to be similarly defective, but

Mr. Higgins protested against it being disposed of as the others had been. He stated that the word "Aug." and the year "1883" had been written one day during the month of August before signature for the especial purpose of avoiding objection on the ground of their having been filled up prior to the qualifying period, and that they were received by the vestry clerk on the 25th of August, and he produced evidence to bear out his statement. Moreover, he said these were the names of substantial people who had appeared upon the list of voters in the two previous years, and drew the attention of the Barrister to the sub-section of the 28th section of 41 and 42 Viet. cap. 26, inquiring whether, as the omission in these claims was obviously an error, that did not empower him to insert the date on which the claims were handed to the vestry clerk.

Mr. Seager contended that the date as it stood rendered the claims invalid, and that it was absolutely necessary to prove the actual day on which the claim was made. He reminded the Barrister that he decided against him last year on precisely similar grounds, and referred him to the case of "Beeulin v. Hockin," where an objection was ruled by the judges to be invalid owing to the omission of the year from the date. He argued that the judgment in that case showed that the day, the month, and the year were necessary to constitute a legal date, and that the case under discussion was precisely anologous.

The Barrister inquired whether Mr. Seager was sure that in the case he decided last year the month was inserted in the claim.

That gentleman replied in the affirmative.

The Barrister remarked that he was at a loss to see what harm could result from the mere omission of the day in the date, but if no month were mentioned there would of course be an end to the matter.

Mr. Higgins drew attention to the fact that the decision cited by Mr. Seager was in the matter of an objection, which was a very different thing to a householder claim.

Mr. Seager said he thought the two were analogous so far as informality was concerned.

The Barrister, having looked at the judgment handed to him, remarked that an objection was much more strongly considered by the court than a claim, and reserved his decision.

WESTMINSTER.

Yesterday morning Mr. Bathurst, the Revising Barrister for the city of Westminster, held his court at the Vestry-hall, Piccadilly.

Mr. Irwin, Mr. W. Spink, and Mr. Ross, appeared for the Conservatives; Lieutenant Cavanagh for the Liberals; and Mr. W. Richards for the United Kingdom Alliance.

In the course of the revision of the lodger list the question of the signature of claims again arose. In one case the canvasser for the Liberals signed the declaration on the form of claim to the effect that he had himself seen the claimant—a Mr. Nott—sign the claim; but Mrs. Nott, the claimant's wife, came forward and declared that she herself had signed the form for her husband.

The Revising Barrister said that this sort of thing ought to be stopped, but all he could do was to impound the false declaration of the canvasser in accordance with the 25th section of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878. It would then rest with the agents whether they proceeded further in the matter.

The Revising Barrister, with reference to the new claims, said he thought the overseers should verify them, and he would be ready to allow reasonable expenses for such work, as it would greatly add to the completeness of the revision.

The Conservatives objected to J. Branton, of 12, West-street, on the ground that he could not be found.

Mr. Cavanagh handed in a declaration in writing, purporting to be signed by Mr. Branton, stating that his claim was correct.

The Revising Barrister said he could not accept such a declaration as evidence, for how was he to know whether the signature was really Mr. Branton's signature? After what had occurred he was unusually suspicious. (Laughter.) This was a case in which a person had been duly objected to, and the claimant ought to meet the objection in the proper way, by personal attendance or by sending some one who could speak for him. The objection must be allowed and the name expunged.

Some further revelations regarding the signatures to claim forms were made during the course of the day. A general discussion having arisen on the question, one of the Liberal canvassers, who had witnessed some of the claims, stated that he had received instructions from Lieutenant Cavanagh that the wife could sign the claimant's name and that the claim forms could be left and the signatures witnessed afterwards.

Lieutenant Cavanagh emphatically denied giving such instructions. It was represented to him that claims would be more readily signed if the forms were left at the houses, but his precise instructions were that in all cases where the canvasser signed as a witness he should see the claimant sign his name.

The canvasser said he had understood his instructions to be in the sense he had stated. He admitted that some of the claims he had sent in were so witnessed by him, but he could not say how many.

Another canvasser was called by the Barrister, and he stated that in some of his cases he had placed his name on the form without having seen the claimant sign his name.

The Revising Barrister said it appeared to him that through the blundering of the canvassers some of the claims had not been properly attested, and he thought these claimants ought to be summoned by the Liberal agent. After these statements he could not trust any of the signatures to which objection was raised, and he should have to adjourn the cases in order that the claimants might themselves be called.

At the evening sitting Mrs. Mann, the wife of a police-constable, attended in support of her husband's claim.

The Revising Barrister—Probably the canvasser did not know your husband was a police-constable?

Mrs. Mann stated that the canvasser called at her house and asked her if she rented three rooms at 10s. a week. The canvasser then inquired if her husband was in, and she said "No, but she would sign the paper." This she did, but she did not read the paper.

The Revising Barrister—Let me caution you not to sign papers without reading them in future. (To Mr. Irwin: This is only another instance of the same thing.)

Another case was that of a man named Lewis, whose claim was signed with a cross, and witnessed by Mr. King, a Liberal canvasser.

The wife said a man (she could not recognise Mr. King) called with a claim form, but her husband, who could not write, was out, and never saw the form. She did not put a cross upon it.

Lewis was then called, and repeatedly and positively denied that he had put a cross to any paper during the last few months. He said he had never seen Mr. King.

The Revising Barrister—Now, Mr. King, do you know this mark; did you see the man make it?

Mr. King—I really cannot say. My impression is the wife made the mark.

The Revising Barrister—Well, the claim must come out. I think it is quite possible the man may have forgotten that he put his mark. I cannot carry it further. If I had seen grounds for it I would have sworn all the witnesses.

Another case of a curious nature was the Liberal claim of Mr. Widnett, Lisle-street, purporting to be witnessed by Mary Widnett, Wardour-street, and was dated the 8th of August.

Mr. Widnett, called, said he did not sign the claim, and did not know the writing of the apparent witness. He had a stepmother named Mary Widnett, but she had been out of town for two months.

The Revising Barrister—Who sent this claim in?

Lieutenant Cavanagh—It is in Mr. Bell's district.

The Revising Barrister (to Mr. Bell)—Do you know anything about this?

Mr. Bell—It is not my writing. It looks like a woman's hand.

The Revising Barrister—It is well for you you hav'nt witnessed that. All I can do is to disallow the claim.

SOUTHWARK.

Mr. William Ribton, the Revising Barrister for this borough, resumed the revision yesterday morning at the Town-hall, Spa-road, Bermondsey.

Mr. Thomas M. Richards and Mr. Frank Baker represented the Conservative and Mr. Thomas Parish and Mr. E. C. Middleditch the Liberal interests. Mr. William J. Thomas, the district agent of the Local Option and Alliance Union, was also present for that organisation.

The lists down for revision were those of the parishes of St. Mary, Rotherhithe, in which there are 413 occupiers, 161 old and 151 new lodger claimants, with 145 objections; St. John's, where there are 34 occupiers, 19 old and 10 new lodger claimants, with 79 objections, and the remainder of the Bermondsey lists. In the lodger list of the parish of St. Mary Magdalene, Bermondsey, a question arose of considerable interest as regards lodger claimants.

John Adam claimed as the occupier of two rooms unfurnished, on the first floor of the house, 25, West-street, Neckinger-road, for which he paid 5s. per week.

Mr. Parish objected to the claim on the ground that Adam had not occupied the lodgings a sufficient time to give him a qualification, having only gone into the lodgings since August, 1882.

Another claim was also objected to on a similar ground, but as the only evidence in support of the objection was the statement made to the canvasser on his calling at the houses of the respective claimants, the Revising Barrister ruled that he must act upon the statutory declarations of the claimants.

Mr. Richards—I have no evidence but what was told our canvassers by Mrs. Scott, the landlady, and in neither of those cases can we have any evidence but what we gather from the parties in the house.

The Revising Barrister—That evidence is not sufficient to rebut the prima facie evidence afforded by the claim.

Mr. Parish said if that class of evidence was considered useless, the matter would come to this, that the parties sending in such claims and those attesting them would be prosecuted criminally.

The claims were allowed.

In the case of Charles Young, who claimed a householder vote for 16, Cranham-road, Rotherhithe, the Liberals objected on the ground that he had only entered into possession on the 17th of July, 1882, instead of on the 15th, as required by the act.

It was stated that Mr. Young was married on the 16th of July, and went into the house on the following day.

Mr. Richards contended that Mr. Young must have been in occupation before that date, because he would doubtless be in the house and making preparation for his bride before he was married, seeing that he actually took possession of the house the day after his marriage.

The Barrister having considered the point, decided in favour of Mr. Richards's view. The claim was allowed.

William Hillidge, 34, Parish-street, Rotherhithe, claimed a householder's vote for the residence occupied by him, attached to the workhouse.

The claim was not opposed, and the Barrister thought it should be allowed, provided Mr. Hillidge was able to prove that he could do his work as well by living off the premises.

CHELSEA.

Mr. Octavius John Williamson, the barrister appointed to revise the parliamentary list of voters for this borough, held a further sitting yesterday at the board-room of the Chelsea Vestry-hall.

Major Gray appeared for the Conservatives: Mr. Loader and Mr. Shillinglaw for the Liberals; and Mr. J. Hilton for the Local Option Union.

At the sitting of the court the Revising Barrister gave a reserved decision upon an important point raised on the previous day. John Stead, of 87, Manor-street, a coffee-palace keeper, claimed a vote, and the question was raised as to whether he was obliged to live there, or whether he could conduct the business without residence there. It now transpired that the proprietor had a house next door, and that he had the option of putting his servants there or of living there himself. The Revising Barrister held that the adjoining house was practically the same premises, as it was compulsory residence. The claim must be disallowed. In regard to another point, he (Mr. Williamson) said he had considered the question of removing a name from the overseers' list of occupants to the list of lodgers. It seemed obvious that that could be done under the powers of the 12th sub-section of the 28th section of the Municipal and Parliamentary Registration Act. In the case of a man finding himself on the overseers' list, he was not likely to trouble himself to claim. Five judges had declined to define the difference between a lodger and a householder, and it was not likely that an ordinary voter could see the distinction. If, therefore, a man was objected to, and the Revising Barrister found him to be qualified as a lodger, rather than as a householder, he had the power to transfer the name as contended by Mr. Hilton. He (Mr. Williamson) would give a formal decision on this matter on Monday next.

A question arose with respect to separate occupiers' claims, and after some discussion the Revising Barrister said that he conformed with the ruling of the other revision courts of the metropolis this year, to the effect that where a man lived in a house, the landlord of which did not reside on the premises, and changed from one set of rooms to another in that house during the qualifying period, he must make a succession claim, just as if he moved from one house to another.

A number of claims were struck out in consequence of the parties being in receipt of parochial relief, and also for not occupying premises within the qualifying year.

Objection was taken to a voter named Scott, who was stated not to have premises at a certain house. It was stated that Scott lived at 19A in a certain street, and that there were three or four houses numbered 19A, the tenants putting their own numbers on the door.

The Revising Barrister remarked that self-reliance was said to be an Englishman's privilege, either in a desert or a palace, and that this quality had no doubt been exercised in the numbering of these houses. The claim stood over.

BRIGHTON.

Mr. Jemmett, revising barrister, held a court here yesterday. There were 199 property claims and 186 were objected to, 82 lodger claims and 42 fresh lodger claims. The claims for the burgess list numbered 188. The Conservatives objected to the claim of a board school master on the ground that he occupied a house adjoining the schools for which he did not pay rates and taxes. The Liberals contended that the amount of rent and taxes was virtually deducted from his salary, and the revising barrister allowed the claim.

Attempted Burglary in South Kensington.—Between midnight and one o'clock on Tuesday morning a determined attempt was made to commit a burglary at No. 101, Cromwell-road, South Kensington, the residence of Mr. Phillips. It appears that the burglar effected an entrance in the rear of the premises from Ashburn-place. The noise caused by the breaking of a window, however, aroused the cook, who immediately gave the alarm. The burglar then decamped, leaving a "jemmy" behind him in his flight.

Serious Accident at a Rehearsal.—During the Rehearsal of "Othello" at the Fourteenth Street Theatre, New York, on the 10th inst., an accident occurred which created great alarm, but fortunately did not result fatally. A part of the stage, known technically as the practical bridge, gave way and precipitated 14 persons into the cellar 16 feet below. The stage was set for the second act, where the populace welcome Othello upon his return. The bridge was raised four feet, surmounted by battlements, and the procession was crossing it coming down the stage. Miss Edith Lynne stood in the first entrance looking at Miss Ellie Wilton—Desdemona—who had just descended the steps with her two attendants. Mr. Fred Price came next, drilling the supernumeraries, and while he was on the bridge it began to sink, and then followed a crash. For a few moments no one seemed to know what had happened. Four ladies and nine men were precipitated into the cellar, two of the former were only scratched, while Mrs. Le Forrest and Kate Burns were more seriously injured. Mrs. Le Forest, who had a minor part, was severely injured: some one fell upon her chest, and Dr. Keane, of St. Vincent's Hospital, reported a fracture of the eleventh rib, shocks to the spine, and severe bruises. She was taken to her home, No. 113, West Fifteenth-street. It is a curious circumstance that her husband, who was a stage carpenter before he became blind, assisted in constructing this very bridge when the theatre was reconstructed under Fletcher's régime in 1876. He says it was amply strong, and had even borne an elephant in one spectacular play. Mr. Fred Price, a young actor, received the brunt of the fall of several people, and was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital. He sustained a compound, dislocated dislocation of a large bone in the foot, accompanied by hemorrhage, and severe pain. J.W. Brawley, aged 38, was another of the injured. At the New York Hospital it was found that he had received injury to the bones in one foot, and he was detained in the hospital. Mr. Daniel Colville, the manager and lessee of the theatre, could assign no cause for the fall of the bridge. He said it had often borne much heavier weight, and that the same people passed over the spot several times before it fell.

MIDDLESEX SESSIONS.—Thursday.

(Before Mr. Prentice, Q.C.)

Margaret Collins, 50, was indicted for stealing the sum of £10 14s. 6d. from the person of James Smith.

Mr. Maurice prosecuted.

The prosecutor, who is a printer, living at 14, Finsbury-square, on the night of the 13th inst. was returning home after having been dining out, and was not altogether sober, when he was accosted by the prisoner, and after talking for a few minutes missed £10 14s. 6d. from his pocket. He charged the prisoner with the robbery, which she denied, but upon him calling a constable she handed him £3 of the money. He then gave her into the custody of Police-constable Golighter, and she was taken to the station-house.

The jury found the prisoner guilty, and Police-constable Gilchrist proved that on the 19th of August, 1878, the prisoner was convicted at the sessions of this court, and sentenced to seven years' penal servitude and five years' police supervision for felony. Several previous convictions were then proved against her.

Mr. Prentice sentenced her to be kept in penal servitude for five years, to be followed by three years' police supervision.

George William Pearce, 24, barman, was indicted for stealing 1s., the money of William Wiegand, his master.

Mr. Austin Metcalfe prosecuted; Mr. Geoghegan defended.

The prosecutor is a licensed victualler, and keeps the Lion and Lamb, Aske-street, Hoxton, and the prisoner was in his service as barman. Suspicions were entertained of his honesty, and the usual course for testing it was resorted to. Detective Revell was called in, and he marked several shillings and sixpences at six o'clock in the evening. This marked money was given to persons to hand over the counter in payment for articles supplied by the prisoner. The following day the prosecutor missed £2 10s., and the prisoner was spoken to about it. Detective Revell asked him if he had any money about him that did not belong to him, and he took 2s. from his waistcoat pocket, and the detective noticed that one was a marked coin which had been paid over the counter. After this discovery the prosecutor gave the prisoner into custody. The detective then asked him if he had any more money about him, and he said he had not. The detective told him that he should search him, upon which he became very violent, and said he would not allow any one to search him. The detective, however, took hold of his collar, when he kicked him so violently on the leg that it caused him to fall down. Another constable closed with him, and assistance was sent for. It became necessary, however, to throw him down, and handcuffs were put upon him. In his trousers' pocket Detective Revill found £2 16s. 3d. tied up in a handkerchief, all in shillings, sixpences, and three-penny pieces.

After an address by Mr. Geoghegan,

The jury found the prisoner guilty, and

He was sentenced to six months' imprisonment, with hard labour.

James Hoar surrendered to his bail to receive judgment upon a plea of guilty at the August Sessions to an indictment for an assault on William Turner.

Mr. Burnie appeared for the prisoner.

The prosecutor had taunted the accused as they were drinking together in a public-house upon having been convicted some years ago. The prisoner rushed at him and nearly forced his eye out with his thumb nail. The prosecutor's sight was fortunately not permanently injured. Upon an appeal from Mr. Burnie the case had been adjourned in order that some compensation might be made for the time prosecutor had been out of work and the pain he had suffered. It now appeared that Turner had accepted £4 in satisfaction of all claims.

On Mr. Burnie's application

The defendant was discharged upon his own recognisances to come up for judgment when called upon.

Edward Stalley, 50, and Henry Runackles, 25, who were convicted on Tuesday last of stealing a watch, value £100, from the person of Alfred Roper at the South Kensington Station of the Metropolitan District Railway, were brought up for judgment.

A City police officer was called, who proved a conviction of three months against Runackles at the Mansion House for stealing a watch.

The Assistant Judge sentenced Stalley to nine months and Runackles to 18 months' imprisonment and hard labour, the latter receiving a warning that should he come again he would be sent to penal servitude.

Metropolitan County Court.—Sitting this day.—City of London.

The Walthamstow Murderer.—The conviction of William Gouldstone for the murder of his five children at Walthamstow was inevitable when his case was tested by the law of insanity as laid down by the judges and approved by the House of Lords in M'Naughten's case (10 Cl. and Fin. 200; 1 C. and K. 130). It was there decided, and it is still the law, that if a man is in a condition of mind to know that the act he is committing is wrong, and consequently punishable, he must be held responsible for the commission of that act. Thus the question of knowledge of right and wrong in the abstract is not now put generally and indefinitely, as was formerly the case after "R. v. Bellingham" (Col. 636), but it is put in reference to the particular act and the particular time of committing it. It is to be hoped that the circumstances attending the Walthamstow murder will convince the Legislature that the time has arrived to enlarge the hard-and-fast rule laid down by M'Naughten's case. Gouldstone, it is true, was perfectly conscious of the enormity of the crime he was committing; he knew and expressed himself willing to pay its penalty, and according to the present state of the law was clearly guilty of murder; but when it is remembered that there was in his case a total absence of any of those motives which almost invariably dictate the crime of murder, and that insanity was hereditary in his family, we cannot help seeing that though the murderer perfectly understood the nature of his act and its consequences, nevertheless his control over his own actions was suspended to such an extent that he was no longer a free agent, but became the victim of an insane and irresistible impulse. It is hard to comprehend on what principle a man should be hung for committing an act which it is impossible for him to resist. It may be argued that no man would ever commit a murder unless urged by an insane impulse, and that if the present ruling of the law be enlarged the murderer will always be able to shelter himself under the plea of insanity—the j'ai vu rouge of the French criminal. But it is seldom that no inducement besides an insane impulse is discoverable in the mind of a murderer, and if murder is prompted by absolutely none of the motives which would influence a sane person, if a man kills a human being whom he loves merely because voices in his diseased brain whisper to him, "The devil wishes it," "He must have red blood," or "Your loved ones must die," surely the prevention of a lunatic asylum is better suited to his case than the cure of the gallows.—Law Times.

Charge against Birmingham Medical Officers.—A remarkable story was told on Wednesday at the meeting of the Birmingham Board of Guardians. It was stated that in looking over the lunacy returns a short time back, Mr. Henley, the Local Government Board inspector, was surprised to discover that while the county returns showed that there was only one lunatic in every 375 of the population, the inhabitants of Birmingham had among them one in every 196. Further inquiry showed that there were no fewer than 570 private pauper lunatics receiving medical attention at their own homes. The Board of Guardians instituted an investigation, and the committee reported that in 85 cases they found that no medicine had been given, six had not been prescribed for, in 49 cases medical visits were not desired, in 35 no application was made to the relieving officer, 26 were partially supporting themselves, 13 were entirely supporting themselves, 19 were able to pay for medical assistance, six were receiving aid from clubs, in 30 cases there were discrepancies in dates of visits, two had paid money to medical officers, 16 were sent to the workhouse, five to the asylum, 26 were dead, 21 could not be found. Thus there were over 300 cases in respect of which the parish had been regularly paying at the rate of 10s. per annum for services which, according to the committee's report, either have not or ought not to have been rendered. A strict inquiry is about to be made into the matter.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MANSION HOUSE.

George Batchelor and John M'Pherson were charged on remand before Alderman Sir A. Lusk with a watch robbery.—On Tuesday afternoon Mr. Jackson, an elderly gentleman, was proceeding along one of the avenues in Leadenhall Market, in company with his wife, when he was impeded by several men, among whom were the prisoners. Shortly afterwards he heard some one say that he had lost his watch, and he then found his chain hanging down. It was alleged by one of the witnesses that Batchelor stole the watch and passed it to M'Pherson. The prisoners were ultimately arrested, and the watch, which had been dropped, was subsequently picked up and taken to the police-station. Both prisoners denied the charge, and said they were respectable men.—A constable named Goodyer proved that M'Pherson had been previously convicted, having been sentenced to 10 years' penal servitude and five years' subsequent police supervision.—Sir Andrew Lusk committed the prisoners for trial at the next sessions of the Central Criminal Court.

GUILDHALL.

Thomas Midlin, a lad of 15, was charged before Alderman Isaacs with cruelly ill-treating a horse by working it with a sore under the saddle and also while in a weak and low condition, in a van laden with over half a ton of cheese, and Daniel Sargeant, trading under the name of Daniel Sargeant and Co., of 105, Minories, as carmen and contractors, appeared to answer the charge of causing the horse to be so cruelly ill-treated.—After evidence had been heard Midlin was discharged and called as a witness against his master, whose attention, he said, he had called to the sore.—Alderman Isaacs said it was one of the grossest cases of cruelty that had ever come before him. A fine would not meet it, and defendant would have to go to prison for seven days with hard labour.

BOW-STREET.

Two men, named Isaac Isaacs and Thomas Brewer, were charged with being suspected persons loitering for the supposed purpose of committing a felony.—About eleven o'clock on Wednesday night the prisoners and another man were observed outside the Adelphi Theatre. The performance was just over, and the audience coming out. Owing to the suspicious manner of the prisoners and their companion Detective Drew kept a close watch on them. He saw them follow a gentleman some few yards down the Strand, and again return to the theatre. The two prisoners stood in the middle of the road, while the other man mixed with the crowd. Shortly afterwards he signalled to the prisoners, and all three followed an elderly gentleman to Charing-cross. Near Agar-street Isaacs and the man not in custody passed the gentleman—one on each side, and having done so walked in front of him. They suddenly turned sharply round and hustled up against the gentleman, while Brewer, who had been following closely on his heels, put his left arm round his body. Drew had followed, and as Brewer withdrew his arm the detective seized it, and asked the gentleman if he had lost anything. He had not, but seemed very much confused by the way in which he had been accosted. The prisoners were taken into custody, but their companion escaped.—A remand was granted for inquiries to be made.

WESTMINSTER.

William Hammond, poulterer, was charged with attempting to burglariously break and enter the dwelling-house, No. 26, Carlyle-square, owned by Mr. Robert Bayley.—Police-constable Fox stated that about three o'clock that morning he was on duty in Carlyle-square, and hearing a noise in the front garden of 26, he got on the garden wall, about 5½ft. high. He saw the prisoner against the window of the school-room. He was sitting with his feet in the area. When asked what he was there for he made no reply, and witness consequently drew his staff, jumped over the wall, and told the prisoner he should knock him down if he moved. His hand was raised, and he had a knife with a short blade open, which he gave up. He then got up and was taken into custody. The window frame had been tampered with, the marks corresponding with the knife. On searching him a knife and two whistles were found.—Inspector Minaham asked for a remand, as there was reason to inquire into the antecedents of the prisoner.—Anne Clarke, cook at the house of Mr. Bayley, proved that the house was securely fastened at 10.30, excepting the school-room referred to, which was seldom used, but although the shutters were open and the window unfastened, there were bars. The room had not been used for a fortnight. Nothing had been disturbed.—In answer to Mr. Partridge, the inspector said there were marks as of the gate being climbed, and the prisoner's boots corresponded with certain marks. The wood produced had been broken off the side of the window, and two of the iron bars had been tampered with. When reference had been made to the boots, the prisoner said he did not know how he got on to the premises.—The prisoner was remanded.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.

William Marshall Lang, a young man, was brought up by Detective-sergeant Frederick Church, on a warrant, for stealing the sum of £62 13s. 7d., the money of his father, George Lang, coppersmith, of 46, Gerrard-street, Soho.—Mrs. Lang, mother of the prisoner, said that her husband being away from home left a blank cheque, after endorsing it, to pay wages to the workmen, the cheque-book being in a tin box in the office. The prisoner asked for the key of the box, saying he wanted a long billhead, and she gave the prisoner the key. He did not return it, and left, and not returning the following day, she had to force the box open, and then missed the cheque from the book. She afterwards saw the cheque at the London and Westminster Bank, St James's-square, and she was sorry to say that the filling up was in the prisoner's handwriting—Mr. Augustus Denvelle, cashier at the St. James's-square branch of the London and Westminster Bank, proved cashing the cheque produced.—Detective-sergeant Church said that he apprehended the prisoner at Liverpool, and found upon him £27 in gold and a ticket for his passage to New York by the ship Chicago.—The prisoner, who said he spent the balance of the money in paying his passage, &c., pleaded guilty, and was committed for four months' hard labour.

MARYLEBONE.

John Davies, 21, was charged with disorderly conduct in Harrow-road and assaulting Police-constable Hill.—The evidence was that a number of lads, with whom was the prisoner, were making a great noise outside some shops in the Harrow-road, and the prosecutor ordered them away. Some of the lads did go away, but the prisoner refused, and the prosecutor, finding that he could not persuade him to go home, took him into custody. The prisoner then became very violent, struck prosecutor several times, and knocked him down, and but for the assistance rendered by a clergyman the prisoner would have escaped.—In reply to the charge Davies said the constable interfered with him while he was quietly talking to a man he knew, and because he would not move on immediately the constable trod on his heels, and he (prisoner) might have pushed the constable. He had a witness (who was not present) who would prove what he had said to be true.—The prisoner was remanded.

A young man named Alexander Munro, described as a painter, residing at Titchborne-street, Edgware-road, was charged on a warrant with unlawfully assaulting Clara Carter, an infant, aged two years and eight months.—Elizabeth Carter, 41, Market-street, said she was the grandmother of the child, and generally took charge of her. On Tuesday last witness had to go out to do some work, and she took the child round to the prisoner's house for her (witness's) daughter to take care of her. She next saw the child at five o'clock in the afternoon, when she was bruised all over the back, and her arm was injured. The child was quite well in the morning, but how she came to be injured the witness did not know. She spoke to prisoner as to the condition of the child, when he admitted having beaten her, and said he would do it again. He was only sorry he had not broken her back and thrown her on to the fire.—Mr. Cate, medical officer of St. Mary's Hospital, said he had examined the child and found she had been severely beaten all over the back. The effusion of blood under the outer skin could only have been caused by great violence. It might have been done with the hand, but more likely with a hard flat instrument. The left arm elbow was greatly inflamed in the joint, which might have been caused by a blow, but more probably by very rough handling.—The magistrate remarked that anything more brutal could not be than for a man like the prisoner to ill-treat a little helpless child, only two years of age; and that brutality had been intensified by the words which the prisoner had given expression to, that "he was sorry he had not broken her back and thrown her on the fire." He sentenced the prisoner to six months' imprisonment with hard labour.

WORSHIP-STREET.

James Woodhouse, aged 18, tailor, Coburg-street, Clerkenwell, was charged with having stolen a watch from the person of George Clench, at Mile-end-road.—The prosecutor said he was among a crowd in the Mile-end-road, watching a quack doctor selling herbs. He saw the prisoner there, and suddenly saw him make a grasp at his watch-chain, pulling it out, and passing it to another. Witness turned round quickly and caught hold of the prisoner, holding him until a policeman came up, when he was given into custody. The man to whom the prisoner passed the watch went to the station and gave up the watch, but he was not charged there, as the prosecutor could not identify him.—The police-constable who took the prisoner into custody said he denied having taken anything from the prosecutor.—Mr. Bushby remanded the prisoner, in order that inquiries might be made as to his former career.

Henry Johnson, 20, was charged with having stolen three Brussels carpets, value £12, from the shop of Thomas Chopping, Mare-street, Hackney.—The prosecutor said he saw three men drive up to his shop-door with a van, while he was on the other side of the street. The prisoner got down and helped to place three carpets on the van. Witness ran over to them, but they got away. The prisoner, however, was afterwards caught.—The magistrate remanded the prisoner in order that the other men might be apprehended.

CLERKENWELL.

J. Torble was charged with having violently assaulted Thomas Robinson, possession man to the High Bailiff of the Clerkenwell County-court.—The plaintiff was put in possession of defendant's premises on August 24. At night the defendant, on arriving home, asked him what he was doing there, and afterwards rushed at him and knocked him down. A constable arrived, and advised plaintiff to give the defendant into custody, but he refused, preferring to stay and receive the amount of his claim, which was now offered him by the defendant's wife.—The defendant was committed for trial, being admitted to bail in two sureties each of £50.

THAMES.

Mary Callaghan, an aged, decrepid old woman, who could scarce walk through feebleness, was charged with wandering without any visible means of subsistence. The prisoner seems to have made it a practice of wandering about the streets from morning until night soliciting alms. Only on Wednesday she was charged at this court with begging, but owing to her promising not to come to the court again, she was discharged.—At six o'clock that morning Police-constable Hillier was on duty in Wapping, when he saw the prisoner walking about in a dejected manner, and on questioning her she said she had been turned out of her lodging and had no home or place to go to. He took her into custody, and went to her room which she had occupied, and there was not a particle of food or furniture in the place, only a small portion of straw where she used to sleep.—Mr. Lushington said that if the prisoner could not keep herself she had better go into the workhouse, and if she did not take what the law offered she would have to go to prison. He discharged her, and instructed a constable to take her to the relieving officer of St. George's Workhouse.

William Hennessy and Eliza Smith were charged, the male prisoner with violently assaulting Police-constable Curling, and Smith with resisting the constable.—At half-past five o'clock on the previous evening Curling was called to a disturbance in St. George's-street, when the male prisoner struck him a violent blow on the nose, making it bleed, seized hold of his throat, nearly strangling him, and bit a piece out of his thumb. He was also kicked severely about the body by the mob, and his truncheon was taken away by the female prisoner. Other constables came up, and the prisoners were taken into custody.—Mr. Lushington sentenced the male prisoner to one month's hard labour, and fined the woman 10s.

Alfred Thomas was charged with assaulting Jane Hicks, of 125, Dundas-road.—On Tuesday fortnight Mrs. Hicks, who is the prisoner's landlady, went to his house at 9, Vinor-road, to ask him for rent owing and the keys of the house, as she had reason to believe he was going to quit without payment of rent. He asked her who she was, and on her telling him struck her a blow in the breast, knocking her backwards, and threatened to kill her. A summons was taken out against the prisoner, but he did not answer to it, and a warrant was granted for his apprehension.—A witness was called to prove that the prisoner only pushed the complainant.—Mr. Lushington fined the prisoner 20s.

HAMMERSMITH.

James Parkins, a fisherman, living at Strand-on-the-Green, was summoned by Mr. Payne, on behalf of the Thames Conservancy, for having a quantity of undersized fish in his possession.—Mr. Rough, the river keeper, said that while overhauling some fishermen's boats off Chiswick he found the defendant in possession of a number of small flounders. The witness produced some of the fish, and measured them, showing that they were not 7in. in length. He added that he threw 150 flounders back into the river.—Mr. Paget observed that it was a great shame to take such small fish out of the river, and fined the prisoner 10s. and 2s. costs.

GREENWICH.

Sarah Mary Ann Newman, married, of Westminster, was charged with throwing a quantity of vitriol over Cornelius Mahoney, at Rotherhithe, with intent to inflict grievous bodily harm.—Inspector Galpin said the injured man was unable to attend.—Charles Harrington, a labourer, said that he was in the Sir Garnet Wolseley public-house on the previous evening, when the prisoner came in with a child, and bought some whisky. He heard her say to a man, "What are you going to do about this child?" A moment after the man was stooping down speaking to the child, when the prisoner said "Take that," and then threw the contents of a glass full of sulphuric acid in his face; she repeated "Take that," and then threw the glass, cutting the man's face. Mahoney seemed very much burnt. Witness spoke to the prisoner, who said, "Revenge is sweet," and "I've done it now."—Mr. Marsham remanded the prisoner for the attendance of the injured man.

Thomas Williams, a respectably-dressed young man, who refused his address, was brought up on remand, charged with being concerned in a number of robberies of money from shops.—Mr. B. Wontner prosecuted on behalf of the Public Prosecutor.—Clara Hart, assistant to Mr. Jolland, dyer, of Kirkdale, Sydenham, said that on the 17th of July the prisoner drove up to the shop in a trap, and beckoned her out. He there asked her about dyeing 20 jerseys for a club. He said he would send a boy with them. About an hour afterwards witness missed the cash-box, which contained £4 odd in money and a cheque for 12s. 4d. She remembered a lad with his coat off coming in for change just before.—Harriet Woodman, hosier, High street, Shoreditch, deposed to the prisoner driving up in a trap on July 10, and ordering articles to be sent to a little shop close by. She was with him about seven minutes. She afterwards found the cash-box, containing £12, had been stolen.—Other tradesmen spoke to having been robbed in the same way.—Mr. Wontner said he had cases which would bring the total amount up to £100, all within the month of July.—Previous convictions for felony were proved, and the prisoner, who declared his innocence, was committed for trial at the Old Bailey.

THE BRIGHTON RAILWAY MYSTERY.

The young woman who was charged last week with attempting to commit suicide by taking chloroform whilst travelling by the night mail train from London to Brighton, on Tuesday week, was again brought up at the Brighton Police-court yesterday morning. She was charged in the name of Dudley. On being placed in the dock, accompanied by a female warder from Lewes, the prisoner was asked by the magistrates' clerk (Mr. Verrall), "Will you give the magistrates your name?" In response she merely shook her head. The following additional evidence was then taken:—

Mr. R. J. Rogers, police surgeon, said he had examined the prisoner as to her state of mind, and was of opinion that she was sound in mind and responsible for her actions.

Mr. Bernard Scott, house surgeon to the Sussex County Hospital, said he was of the same opinion.

The evidence given last week as to the prisoner being found in a state of insensibility in a railway carriage, and to having admitted taking chloroform, having been read over and signed by the witnesses,

Superintendent Carter, who had charge of the case, stated that he took the prisoner into custody at the hospital, and told her the charge. She made no reply, but on the way to the station she asked what would be done with her. Witness told her he could not say, but that in all probability she would be remanded for inquiries to be made. She then said, "Well, I will do it; and if no other means offer themselves, I will starve myself."

The Deputy Stipendiary then said the bench had no alternative but to commit the prisoner for trial, and having cautioned her in the usual manner asked her if she had anything to say.

The prisoner merely shook her head, and she was then committed to the Borough Quarter Sessions.

The police authorities have received numerous communications respecting missing females, many of whose descriptions tally almost entirely with that given of the woman in custody. One woman is wanted for robbing her lodgings in Chelsea. Rooms were taken on the 10th of September, and on the day after (the day the woman in custody arrived in Brighton) the young woman was missing, together with two gold rings and a bronze statuette. Two rings exactly similar to those lost were worn by the prisoner, and if she is the same person there is little doubt her name is Lucy, or Lucilla, Dudley, and that she is known at Hastings.

The Murder of Carey.—Great precautions are being taken by the police authorities to secure the safe custody of O'Donnell in Millbank. In most respects they are the same as when Dr. Gallagher and his fellow conspirators were confined there. Patrols surround the prison night and day, and prevent any gathering together of people or loitering in front of the gates. There is, however, a slight difference inside, as, in place of the military sentries and guards lately employed, the whole watching duty is entrusted to selected constables of the Metropolitan Police Force. Until the witnesses arrive in England the Treasury authorities cannot, of course, do much towards preparing the case. Should the vessel with Mrs. Carey and the other witnesses not reach England in time for the examination on Tuesday next another formal remand will, it is understood, be asked for. Mr. Charles J. Guy, solicitor, of Union-court, Old Broad-street, who has been instructed to defend O'Donnell, on proceeding to Millbank, found himself excluded from access to the accused until an authorisation had been obtained from the Home Secretary. He has written to the Home-office for such authorisation, and upon obtaining it will wait upon O'Donnell to receive instructions for the defence. It is stated that an effort is to be made to obtain the services of Mr. Charles Russell, Q.C., M.P., to lead the defence of O'Donnell. A strong central committee is to be immediately formed in London to collect the necessary funds for the prisoner's defence.

The Murderous Assault by Poachers.—James Warner and Jane Warner were yesterday brought before the Belper magistrates charged with murderously assaulting Police-constable Estaff, at Shottle, near Belper, on the night of the 31st of August. The constable stated that while on duty he saw a light under a bridge crossing the river Ecclesburne, at Shottle, and on arriving at the spot found the prisoners with a net and a quantity of trout, and that they had been poaching for fish. He arrested the prisoners, and in conveying them to the Belper Police-station the male prisoner slipped the handcuffs and struck him several blows on the head with them and also kicked him on the face, leaving him on the road unconscious. Medical evidence was given to the effect that the policeman had been in a very critical condition. The prisoners were committed for trial at the assizes.

The Clerical Bigamy Case.—The inquiries which have been made into the antecedents of the Rev. Thomas Morris Hughes point to his identification with a clergyman calling himself the Rev. Thomas Morris, who lodged for some time in 1866 at a house in Bellbarn-road, Birmingham, and who cruelly deserted a woman who passed as his wife, and two children. If, as Mrs. Morris alleged, she had been married to the man, this marriage was followed by two others. The deserted woman went to America, where she has since died.

Interesting Discovery in Chancery-lane.—As the workmen of Mr. Clarke, who is extending the New-courts Chambers from Chancery-lane into Southampton-buildings, were on Tuesday excavating they came upon some masonry. Some such discovery being considered highly probable, Mr. Clarke had already been forwarned by Mr. John Sachs, of the Middlesex Archæological Society, and consequently care was taken. Mr. Sachs was immediately informed of the occurrence, and under his supervision careful investigations were made. So far as matters have progressed, two walls, composed of blocks of chalk and cement (Norman), and in a beautiful state of preservation and a portion of red tiling glazed with yellow have been brought to light. On digging below the titling a deposit of charcoal was found; such deposit being doubtless a land-mark, for such purpose the imperishable nature of charcoal well adapts it, and for which it has been frequently employed. Some human bones were also come upon; so the very reasonable surmise is that the remains are those the Knights Templars left behind them when they removed to the Temple. Mr. Sachs certainly had these remains in his mind when he enjoined care in excavating. More, doubtless, remains to be discovered. The tiles are now on view at Mr. Clarke's office, in New-courts-chambers. Some fragments of Saxon pottery were also found.—Solicitors' Journal.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated July 3, 1882), with a codicil (dated June 3, 1883), of the Very Rev. Archibald Boyd, D.D., Dean of the Cathedral Church of St. Peter in Exeter, who died on July 11 last, was proved at the Exeter district registry on the 17th ult. by Archibald Henry Boyd, the nephew, and William John Battishill, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £134,000. An incomplete account of this will has already been published, but the following is a correct and full report. The testator gives £10,000 to the Dean and Chapter of Exeter for the augmentation of the incomes of poor parishes in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter; £10,000 upon trust to apply the income for the education, in their University career, of the sons of the clergy of the diocese of Exeter; £5,000 to the fund established by the late Bishop Philpotts for the promotion of theological studies; £5,000, upon trust, to apply the interest in augmenting the incomes of the incumbents of 10 of the most necessitous parishes in Exeter; £5,000, upon trust, to apply the income in apprenticing or starting in life chorister boys and boys educated at the cathedral school; £1,000 towards the restoration of the cathedral and the restoration and enlargement of the library; £1,000 each to the Church Missionary Society for Africa and the East, and the Irish Clergy Sustentation Fund; £500 each to the Church Pastoral Aid Society, the Corporation of the Sons of the Clergy, St. John's Foundation School for the education of the sons of the clergy, and the Additional Curates' Aid Society and the Church Building Society, both in the diocese of Exeter; £300 to St. Ann's School for the education of the children of parents in reduced circumstances; £250 each to the Devon and Exeter Hospital, the Cheltenham General Hospital, and St. Mary's Hospital, Paddington; £200 each to the Exeter Dispensary, the Institution for the Welfare of the Deaf and Dumb, Exeter, the Institution for the Welfare of the Blind, Exeter, the Exeter Female Penitentiary, the Exeter Eye Infirmary, and the Exeter Central School for erecting a class-room; £100 to the fund for removing houses interfering with the appearance of Exeter Cathedral; £10,000 to his sister, Miss Louisa Boyd; £3,000 each to 10 nephews and nieces; £3,000 each to his three stepdaughters; and liberal legacies to servants and others. The residue he leaves to his nephew, Archibald Boyd.

The will (dated January 30, 1879), with a codicil (dated June 2, 1881), of General the Right Hon. Sir William Thomas Knollys, P.C., K.C.B., and, as stated in both his testamentary papers, "by hereditary descent and the law of the land Earl of Banbury, Viscount Wallingford, and Baron Knollys, of Greys, in the county of Oxon," late of South Court, Royal Court Palace of Westminster, who died on June 23 last, was proved on the 30th ult. by Francis Knollys, C.B., the son and sole executor, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £32,000. The testator leaves to his said son, Francis, the Blount Court estste, with the farming stock; he also leaves to him the bronze bust of the Prince Consort, presented to him by her Majesty the Queen; the photograph portrait of the Princess of Wales, presented to him by her Royal Highness; the silver tankard and the pair of silver candelabra presented to him by the Prince of Wales, the silver tankard presented to him by the King of Denmark, and some jewellery, for the purpose of being retained in the family in the nature of heirlooms; and there are bequests and appointments to his other children, having regard to the advancements made to them in his lifetime. The residue he gives to his children in equal shares.

The will (dated February 2, 1883) of Sir John Bell William Mansel, Bart., J.P., D.L., of Lincoln's-inn, barrister-at-law, late of Wrotham Heath, Kent, who died on April 14 last, was proved on the 17th ult. by Frederick Henry Cator and Edward Bannister, the executors, the value of the personal estate exceeding £9,000. The testator leaves £500 and his furniture, effects, horses and carriages at Wrotham Heath, to his wife, Dame Maria Georgiana Mansel; his real estate at Wrotham Heath and elsewhere in the county of Kent to his wife for life, and then to his daughter Elizabeth, subject to her paying £5,000 to his daughter Mrs. Maria Medlycot; his real estate in the principality of Wales with the furniture and effects there to his daughters Elizabeth and Emma Jane; to his executors £200 each; and the residue of his real and personal estate to his said three daughters.

The will (dated April 27, 1875) of Mr. Matthew Lyon, late of Leamington, Warwickshire, who died on July 12 last, was proved on the 16th ult. by George Lyon, the son, and John Radcliffe Lyon, the nephew, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £37,000. The testator leaves to his son George his share and interest in the Royal Manchester Institution, and all his lands, buildings, and hereditaments in Hollinwood, in the county of Lancaster, and, in addition, a watch and two swords, of family interest; and to his executor John Radcliffe Lyon, and to his servant, Mary Kaye, £50 each. The residue of his real and personal estate is to be divided between all his children in equal shares.

The will (dated March 2, 1878), with three codicils (dated March 25, 1878; April 22, 1879; and February 20, 1883), of Miss Caroline Hutton, late of Eastgate, Lincoln, who died on March 11 last, has been proved at the district registry, Lincoln, by the Rev. Henry Wallaston Hutton and Dr. Philip John Hensley, the nephews, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £30,000. A brief abstract of this will has been given. The following account contains the whole of the charitable bequests. The testatrix bequeaths £4,000 to the Church Missionary Society; £500 each to the British and Foreign Bible Society, the Church Pastoral Aid Society, and the National Refuges for Homeless and Destitute Children, and the training-ships Arethusa and Chichester; £500 to build a fever ward in connection with Lincoln County Hospital; £500 to the Bishop of Ruperts Land, to found a scholarship or fellowship at St. John's College, Winnipeg, Manitoba, for the sons of native Indians desirous of entering holy orders; an amount equal to the proceeds of the sale of her dwelling-house and premises in Eastgate, as to £500 thereof for the Lincoln General Dispensary, and as to the remainder, for the County Hospital; £300 each to the Shipwrecked Mariners' Aid Society, the Earlswood Idiot Asylum, and the South American Missionary Society; £200 each to the Church of England Missions to Seamen, the Governesses' Benevolent Institution, the Samaritan Free Hospital, the Church of England Scripture Readers' Association, and the London City Mission; £100 to the Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews; and numerous legacies to relatives and others. As to the residue of her property, she leaves one-half to her sister, Maria Symons, and one-half between her three nieces, Emily Hensley, Mary Hopkins, and Margaret Rhoda Hensley.

The will (dated March 4, 1881) of the Rev. William Thomas Browning, of Thorpe Mandeville, but late of Lichborough, Northamptonshire, who died on May 7 last, was proved on the 15th ult. by Mrs. Mary Eleanor Browning, the widow, one of the executors, the value of the personal estate exceeding £19,000. The testator leaves to the Horton Infirmary, Banbury, £100; to his wife, besides some specific bequests, £2,000, and an annuity of £600; and the residue of his real and personal estate between all his children in equal shares.—Illustrated London News.

The Railway Accident at New Cross.—One of the men who were injured by the railway accident that occurred on Monday near the New-cross Station of the London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway Company died about one o'clock yesterday morning in Guy's Hospital. His name is John Brookes, and he was a porter employed at Norwood Junction Station. When the accident occurred he was travelling in the brake-van to Norwood Junction, and was thrown out and seriously injured about the head. A piece of glass belonging to the window of the van entered his skull. An operation was performed and it was removed, but it was found that the brain was severely lacerated, and this caused death.

The Cost of Law.—Parliamentary papers recently issued enable an answer to be given to the question how far the civil administration of justice in the High Court of Justice is self-supporting. It appears that for the year ending on the 31st of March last the receipts and payments in the various branches of that court were as follow:—In the Chancery Division the receipts amounted to £211,112, and the expenditure to £288,748, including retiring annuities of judges, and pensions, &c., to officers. In the Queen's Bench Division the receipts were £111,842, and the expenditure £204,423, including compensations and superannuation allowances. In the Probate and Divorce Division the receipts amounted to £134,719, and the expenditure to £164,530, including compensations and superannuations. The receipts in the Admiralty Division amounted to £7,559, and the expenditure to £17,167, including also compensations and superannuations. The receipts in the district registries of the High Court amounted to £22,250, and the expenditure to £16,710. Thus we find that the total receipts of all divisions of the High Court amounted to £487,482, and the expenditure to £691,578; showing an excess of expenditure over receipts of £204,096, or, after deducting compensations and superannuations, of £73,404. It will be interesting to see whether the new table of fees of court, which is understood to be in course of preparation, will be framed on such a scale as to make up this deficiency.—Solicitors' Journal.

9. Ireland, N.	Same as No. 0 and 1.
10. Ireland, S.	Same as No. 8.

Warnings.—The south cone was hoisted last night in Districts 8 and 10, and the north cone this morning in Districts 0, 1, 2, 6, 7, and 9. Both are still up.

REMARKS.

Thursday, 8.30 p.m.

The weather over our islands to-day has been much less settled than for a long time past. In the course of last night and the early hours of this morning a well-formed depression advanced towards our S.W. coasts apparently from the S.W. At 8.0 a.m. to-day its centre was not far from Valentia, where the barometer fell to 29.5in., while at Sumburgh Head and at Toulon it stood at nearly 30.2in. In this way it came about that while rather strong E. winds were blowing on our N. and N.W. coasts, S. to S.W. winds were felt on our S.W. coasts, and W. winds in the Bay of Biscay. Dull, rainy weather set in over Ireland and England very generally as the disturbance advanced, and subsequently extended N. over parts of Scotland. Temperature did not rise above 64deg. or 66deg. at any of our stations during to-day, and in Scotland the maxima were only 55deg. to 57deg. As the day advanced the depression began to move N.N.W., and this evening's reports show that it is distinctly but slowly drawing away from our W. coasts as it moves N. In the N., however, the wind continues to increase steadily in force, and the sky is beginning to assume an unsettled appearance. In the S. and S.W. the weather is at present much finer than it was this morning, and the wind has lulled. The barometer, however, has apparently ceased rising in the S.W. The upper clouds also seem to indicate that further disturbances are approaching our S.W. coasts. The signals hoisted in the S.W. last evening, and those in the N.W., N., and N.E. this morning, have been allowed to remain up. The sea is rather rough in the S.W., and also off the N. and E. of Scotland.

HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE THIS DAY.

Board of Trade Inquiries.—Mr. H. C. Rothery, Wreck Commissioner, presided yesterday at an inquiry instituted by order of the Board of Trade, into the circumstances attending the loss of the iron screw steamer [illegible], belonging to the port of Newcastle-on-Tyne, which was stranded off Penicho, on the coast of Portugal, on the 2[illegible] August last, and became a total wreck; the question for the consideration and determination of the court being whether the casualty was occasioned through any want of proper and seamanlike navigation on the part of the captain or his subordinate officers. After hearing evidence in detail, Mr. Commissioner Rothery, after consulting with the Nautical Commissioners, decided that whilst the captain was liable to some slight blame for not taking casts of the lead, and thus ascertaining by sounding the depth of water and the position in which the vessel was before the casulity occurred, there was nothing to justify the court in inflicting any severe punishment on him, beyond a reprimand for want of precaution in the matter referred to. His certificate would not therefore be interfered with. A Board of Trade inquiry was also held at Cardiff yesterday respecting the stranding of the sailing vessel Milton, of Brixham, Devon. The vessel stranded on Gova Sands, in the Bristol Channel, on the 2d of September. When off Penarth she had been taken in charge by an unlicensed pilot named Reid, and it was subsequent to this that she stranded. The question now arose whether the master was to blame for having accepted Reid's services without having first asked him for his license. The court held that under the circumstances the master was not in default, but it could not too strongly condemn the conduct of Reid, who represented himself to be a properly qualified pilot, and by his want of skill and care brought about the casualty.

"Cathedra Petri," by C. F. B. Allnut, is an exhaustive summary of the evidence furnished by the writings of the Fathers during the early ages of Christianity on the titles and prerogatives of St. Peter and of the See of Rome. It is a most painstaking compilation, and displays much sound learning and scholarly industry. The book consists of three parts. The first enumerates the titles and prerogatives of St. Peter as they are found mentioned by Tertullian and other great writers. Part the second treats of the foundation of St. Peter's See in Rome, for which the first authority quoted is St. Clement of Rome, A.D. 96. Part the third names the Papal titles and the prerogatives ascribed to the earlier Roman Pontiffs. In each case the author has judiciously added the original text, Greek or Latin, of the passages he has cited. The work is one that may well interest all denominations of Christians. Messrs. Burns and Oates are the publishers.
